Amtrak Passenger Service to be Restored Starting Tomorrow

MONTPELIER – Gov. Peter Shumlin issued the following statement after Amtrak announced that partial service will be restored on Vermonter line tomorrow following Monday's derailment in Northfield. The Vermonter northbound train will operate from Washington to Saint Albans as normal tomorrow. Passengers traveling southbound will continue to be transported by bus to Springfield Mass. or New Haven, Conn. where they will board other Amtrak trains.

"I want to thank everyone who worked so hard over the past two days to ensure Monday's derailment caused as little disruption as possible. From the first responders who rushed to the scene to the Norwich University personnel who took in and fed stranded passengers to all those who helped clear the derailed cars and repair the tracks, I want to extend my sincere gratitude. Vermonters reacted to this situation with characteristic community spirit and hospitality, and I am pleased service is being restored in advance of what should be a great weekend to see Vermont's world famous foliage."
