

From: Matt Dunne [dunne@google.com]
Sent: Wednesday, November 14, 2012 8:56 AM
To: Minter, Sue; Miller, Elizabeth
Subject: Gathering to discuss how to best use internet tools in disaster response

Hey Sue and Liz (in your new role),

I wanted to invite you and the appropriate folks from the state emergency response team to attend a regional gathering in NY to discuss how the internet tools can be used in disaster response and what we can do to make sure we are prepared in advance of the next event. We can't cover expenses, but love to have a representative from VT join us.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Matt

SAVE THE DATE

Date: Wednesday, November 28, 2012
Time: 8:30am – 12:00pm
Where: Google New York, 76 Ninth Ave, New York, NY 10011

Superstorm Sandy brought widespread destruction and disruption along the East Coast, and many are still recovering. Over the course of the storm, hundreds of organizations, and hundreds of thousands of people mobilized to help those in need. More than ever before, we saw how people are turning to the Internet to prepare for and respond to natural disasters.

Google will be hosting an event at its New York office on Wednesday, November 28th, to share best practices and challenges from the response efforts to superstorm Sandy. We'll also discuss the new tools that are being used to increase communication and disseminate information before, during and after a crisis.

Please save the date, and look for more details to come in the following days.

The Google Crisis Response Team

--

Matt Dunne
Head of Google Community Affairs
Office: 802-281-4530
Cell: 802-272-5499
Home Office: 802-295-5009
Fax: 802-359-6131