VERMONT DOC ANNOUNCES TRANSITIONAL HOUSING GRANTS

Fifteen agencies partner with Corrections on reentry housing and services

Waterbury, VT, July 15, 2021 – Vermont Department of Corrections is partnering with 15 community organizations to provide reentry housing and services to incarcerated individuals released from correctional facilities.

Effective July 1, 2021, Vermont DOC is funding 274 beds/apartments with 15 housing providers, including two new Community Justice Centers. Housing will be offered in every district, including in Lamoille and Orange Counties, where DOC housing has not existed before.

A public Request for Proposals was issued in January 2021, and in March, we received applications from 25 different organizations. A cross-agency team of six people reviewed and scored each application based on consistent criteria, including experience, program characteristics, cost, and connections to permanent housing. The review team also analyzed proposals based on past performance outcomes, capacity needed in each district, and total average score. Prior to finalizing decisions, we consulted with DOC field staff and leadership, as well as other Agency of Human Services Departments to coordinate efforts on mutual grantees. We then met with each applicant to discuss the results and answer any questions.

“Vermont DOC is engaged in an evolutionary process to most effectively help people return to, and stay stably housed in their communities,” said Commissioner James Baker. “We are excited to work with both existing and new partners to provide individualized services and housing that optimize people’s dignity, stability, and personal choice. By providing congregate and scattered-site apartments, both with intensive supports, we’re offering a broader range of localized opportunities for successful reintegration into the community.”

The Department of Corrections undertook this process as part of the Justice Reinvestment work we’ve been doing in partnership with the legislature and the Council of State Governments (CSG). According to CSG: “Nearly 80 percent of all prison admissions in Vermont were for violations of terms of furlough, probation, or parole supervision from 2017 to 2019. The majority of people who returned to prison for violating the terms of their furlough release did so due to technical violations, which frequently consist of minor offenses, such as a lack of housing, failed drug tests, or missed appointments and curfews.” To help address this challenge, the Vermont DOC Transitional Housing Team created a “Theory of Change” with input from existing community partners, as well as DOC and Agency leadership. The Theory of Change serves as a framework for our investments in re-entry programs that deliver supportive housing that is trauma-informed, provides a range of services, and is focused on restorative justice.
