Oh no, the master "clean up" EO is not going to be ready for weeks if not months. It may not get issued until the late fall. So not time sensitive at all. I think reasonable timeframe is just sometime before legislative session starts.

I am a little leery or revoking it right now given that we are in the middle of a productive but highly charged process of rewriting the management plan. Could we wait until the revised plan is complete and finalized? Or is it time sensitive?

Hi Louis, realize you are at a meeting. No rush, but I realize I should go over this with you as I went over it with Pat. I have had a draft of a "clean up" EO that would rescind various executive orders of prior administrations that are obsolete. I have been wondering about rescinding the below executive order, as I have assumed that its major (legal) purposes are accomplished elsewhere, including in the statutes below. I believe Pat ultimately felt it was ok to revoke this order as sections of it are out of date, though this was with some trepidation given the interests in this area. Regardless, I want to ensure that you/ your general counsel agree this order can or should be revoked at this point if it is in fact obsolete.

IF there are other Executive Orders you all would like to revoke, just let me know. I think all that pertain to F&W are in chapter 10 of title 3a:
