

I love birds, and am in favor of protecting their habitat during the season when they bring their young into the world. I applaud those who work so diligently to protect the tiny turtles as they emerge from the sand. I am part of a group of people who believe that life deserves to be protected. Is it so hard for pro abortionists to understand that there is a life that is being killed? Can we agree that when an abortion happens, something dies? How is this fair? How can anyone think that this is a right – to kill a child?
