

April 26, 2012

I have always been impressed with her ability to work creatively toward common-sense solutions. She pursues results with determination, and she's not afraid to think outside the box. She does all of this with the utmost respect and civility, even when she challenges others. It's this quality that I most admire, and wish there were more of in political discourse.